Peggy Tabor Millin

Peggy Tabor Millin, MA, facilitates classes and retreats for women in writing process through her business ClarityWorks, Inc., in Asheville, North Carolina. She also teaches mixed-gender audiences at Great Smokies Writing Program and College for Seniors at University of North Carolina, Asheville; North Carolina Writers Network, Mountain Area Health Education Center, Asheville; and the Institute for the Advancement of Service, Alexandria, Virginia. She speaks at conventions and organizations interested in creativity, writing and spirituality, and the healing power of writing. Millin combines her knowledge as a writer and writing coach with enthusiasm and humor. She conveys the message that when writers focus on telling their personal truths, rather than on publication, the quality of their writing soars and impacts the quality of their lives in a positive way.

Millin's book Mary's Way was published in the US and Mexico. She has published short fiction and nonfiction in various magazines and literary journals, including Thema and Native Peoples. She holds a BA in English from UC Berkeley and an MA in the psychoneurology of learning and communication disorders from Northwestern University. She is currently working on a book on the writing process and the feminine, as well as on a novel. She has been teaching through ClarityWorks, Inc. for over ten years.
